Pydhone deaths: Morphine, not watermelon

Amit Srivastava

MUMBAI
In the mysterious deaths of four family members in Pydhone, the post-mortems have revealed the presence of morphine, a painkiller, and unusual green discoloration of tissues, hinting at possible poisoning.

Recently, a couple and their two minor daughters died after consuming watermelon.

A total of 11 food samples were collected from the victims' residence. The Food and Drug Administration (FDA), Maharashtra, has found no evidence of adulteration in the 11 food samples collected from the Pydhone family's residence. The samples included biryani, watermelon, water from an earthen pot and refrigerator, raw and cooked rice, raw and cooked chicken, dates, and spices.

Case flags state FDA's constraints to test food for harmful toxins

A senior official confirmed that the analysis conducted at the department's lab did not detect any adulteration in the collected items. Delays in collection may have led to fungal contamination, reducing the chances of obtaining conclusive results.

The case has shed light on the state FDA's constraints to test food and product samples for harmful toxins. For such specialised analysis, it depends on other government agencies, officials confirmed.

FDA commissioner Shridhar Dube Patil said a proposal has been submitted to the state government to address this gap. He explained that detecting toxins such as pesticides, insecticides and disinfectants requires sophisticated and costly equipment along with trained professionals and dedicated lab space. According to the officials, setting up advanced toxin-testing facilities would require an investment of ₹10 crore to ₹20 crore and also a team of 15 to 20 experts, significantly increasing maintenance and staffing expenses. Authorities also pointed out that the demand for such specialised testing remains relatively low, making it challenging to justify the expenditure.

Currently, the FDA's primary role is to detect food adulteration and it is equipped for routine safety checks. However, experts warn that the absence of in-house toxin testing could delay crucial investigations and impact timely public health responses.

Morning walks at SGNP to burn a hole in pockets

Manoj Ramakrishnan
MUMBAI

Morning walkers at the Sanjay Gandhi National Park (SGNP), Borivali, have expressed shock over the park's new visitor tariffs, which have been raised to a whopping ₹10,000 for an annual pass to use the forest road for a two-hour morning walk.

The revised fee, which came into effect from May 1, is a part of a broader hike in the visitor services, including guided tours, safari and internal transport systems. Officials indicated that the revision aims to streamline visitor management while ensuring the upkeep of infrastructure and conservation initiatives. Prior to the fee revision, an official circular, a copy of which is with the FPI, was issued in this regard.

Gopal Zaveri, a Borivali resident and regular walker at the park, said the new fees had left him stunned. "I thought it was a joke until I saw the circular." According to Mumbai March, a citizens' group promoting environmental restoration, between 3,000 and 5,000 people from Borivali, Kandivali and Dahisar come for walks between 5.30am and 7.30am. Exceeding the time limit attracts a fine. Athletes training for long-distance running also use the six-km stretch from the park entrance on the Western Express Highway to Improvements in amenities, safety measures and conservation awareness programmes are expected to accompany the revised pricing. However, walkers said the hike was unjustified. "Five members of my family use the park for walking. What are they levying these fees for," asked Zaveri. He said that the walkers have contributed to facilities such as drinking water and dustbins. "There are no proper toilets or enough guards in case of a leopard attack though such cases are rare," added Zaveri.

SGNP deputy conservator of forests Anita Patil was unavailable for comment. Her former counterpart Anwar Jamal Ahmed recounted, "I think the annual fee for using the park in the morning was around ₹60 during my time."

Separate inquiry for 'misleading court' in hsg soc case

FPJ News Service
MUMBAI

In a dispute over an alleged illegal garage constructed in a housing society, a city civil court has directed that a plea accusing a defendant of making false statements be taken up separately as a judicial inquiry.

Judge Shilpa Todkar, on April 29, said the application filed by the plaintiff and society member, Celine Maria Fernandes, against defendant no 2, Homyar H Limbuwala, cannot be heard within the pending civil suit and must be registered independently as a miscellaneous application.

The original suit, filed in 2020, alleged that an enclosed garage in the Hoshang Baug society in Santacruz, was illegally constructed in the open space of the housing society. During the proceedings, Fernandes accused Limbuwala of making false statements on oath and suppressing key facts to mislead the court. Her counsel argued

Matter pertains to an illegal garage on society premises; defendant accused of making false statements on oath that the defendant's say was not necessary at the stage of registering the application.

The court referred to paragraph 337 of Chapter XIX of the Civil Manual, which lays down the procedure for applications requiring judicial inquiry. "Without going into the merits... the application is required to be separately registered as a miscellaneous application requiring judicial inquiry," the court said, adding that such a plea is "not maintainable" within the pending suit.

In January 2023, the court had dismissed a plea by Limbuwala, seeking rejection of the plaintiff. He had argued that the suit was filed beyond limitation, that the society was a necessary party and that the plaintiff had no locus standi.

The court, however, held that limitation was a mixed question of fact and law requiring evidence. It noted that more details about the alleged construction came to light around 2015-16 when Fernandes' husband became the society's secretary and complaints were made to the municipal authorities. It also found that objections on court fees and locus standi could not be decided at that stage without trial.
